viable aviation industry cluster in Dubai. Dubai South is an ambitious, multi-phased development that builds on Dubai's geographic location, leading position as a logistics and trade hub, and the region's booming aviation sector," said Khalifa AlDaboos, DAE's managing director.

He added: "We are proud to associate with the 2nd annual edition, since we firmly believe that this event is one of the ideal business platforms for the global aerospace companies to take part in the progress of the Middle East's rapidly growing aerospace industry."

Tahnoon Saif, vice president of Dubai South's Aviation District, the host of the summit said: "Ensuring an effective overall supply chain is critical in making sure that the aerospace industry stays afloat in this challenging business climate. The summit will serve as an ideal platform for delegates to build and maintain successful partnerships, so they can overcome the challenges and risks associated with entering new markets from a supplier's perspective.

"In view to the sound success of the first edition of Aerospace Space Supply Chain Summit, we expect over 200 delegates representing the global aerospace supply chain sector from various countries in Dubai to take part in 2nd edition."
