Embraer-X and Pulse Aviation signed a contract for the use of Beacon, the maintenance coordination platform connecting resources and professionals for faster return-to-service aircraft. Based in Florida, Pulse Aviation is a business aviation company providing maintenance, repair, and operations, and will use Beacon to enhance its maintenance coordination, simplify communication around maintenance events of all types of aircraft models, boost team collaboration, improve knowledge exchange, and streamline workflows around maintenance events.

Marco Cesarino, Head of Beacon, commented: “We are confident our support for Pulse Aviation will ensure their maintenance coordination stays ahead of the game in this ultra-competitive industry. Beacon’s fleet agnostic approach improves coordination of any kind of maintenance event, empowering all stakeholders working on maintenance events to get back time and energy, thereby boosting productivity while fueling customer satisfaction and profitability."

Daniel Rios, CEO & Founder, Pulse Aviation, said: “We are strongly positioned in a very demanding market segment and partnering with Beacon supports more collaborative and efficient
